Sunderland Museum, Library and Winter Gardens

With a collection dating back to 1846, there are plenty of surprises in store for visitors to Sunderland Museum, Library and Winter Gardens. Sunderland's rich history of industries is explored throughout the museums four floors.

Exhibition spaces are dedicated to shipbuilding, coal mining, glass making and pottery as well many other aspects of the city's past.

The Museum's Art Gallery shows a significant collection of the works of LS Lowry, an artist who spent lots of time in Sunderland. Our temporary exhibitions have included high profile visiting exhibitions including works by Leonardo Da Vinci and Canaletto.

The Winter Gardens, a 21st century addition to the museum is a tropical paradise and home to our resident Koi Carp.

Over 2,000 plants thrive in the glass rotunda and from the tree top walkway visitors have a bird's eye view of beautiful Mowbray Park. Alongside our permanent and temporary exhibitions, our ever-changing events programme means that there is always something new and exciting to see and do for all the family.

The Museum is right in the heart of Sunderland city centre, on Burdon Road, SR1 1PP.

A man in a dark t-shirt and dark trousers is walking on a silver metal walkway with a mesh railing. The walkway is elevated and curves through a conservatory filled with various green plants, including ferns and ivy. Large windows in the background show an outdoor area with a red and white striped canopy. The scene is brightly lit, suggesting a sunny day.

Discover Sunderland's fascinating history all in one place in the city's first ever museum, which opened its doors back in 1810!

Roker and Seaburn beaches

Sunderland's twin beaches at Roker and Seaburn are the perfect place to unwind. Whether you're looking for somewhere to let the kids run off some excess energy or to sit and relax with a picnic; there's miles of beautiful coastline to choose from.

Roker and Seaburn beaches have been family favourite spots for hundreds of years and the golden sands are a sandcastle builder's paradise. The wide-open promenade and landscaped seafront make for a perfect stroll in the sea air too.

If you really want to take in the air though, a stroll along the recently restored Roker Pier towards the lighthouse is perfect. If you're feeling brave why not take an underground tour through the pier tunnel into the lighthouse?

See map

Linking directly to the beach front is Roker Park. This is a fantastic traditional park with play areas, a lake and a miniature railway alongside the floral displays you'd expect to find. It's ideal if you fancy a break from the sands.

Sunderland's Blue Flag award-winning beaches are ideal for traditional seaside fun.

Roker and Seaburn can be found on the A183 between Sunderland and South Tyneside.

There's lots of parking, much of it free.

Bus services E1, E2 and E6 from Sunderland city centre get to the seaside in under 15 minutes.

Roker Pier and Lighthouse

After restoration, the pier and lighthouse reopened its doors to the public in August 2018. This means that visitors can now access the unique and rarely seen tunnel which stretches the full length of the pier.

Created during construction of the pier between 1885 and 1903, the tunnel was given a 'light touch' restoration, backed by the Heritage Lottery Fund, in order to retain its original character.

Considered a triumph of engineering at the time, both the lighthouse and pier used the finest craftsmen and materials available. The pier itself was built of granite-faced concrete blocks each lowered into place by a massive hydraulic crane nicknamed 'Goliath' which came to dominate Roker seafront over an 18 year period.

Guided tours of the 610 metres long tunnel are available throughout the year (weather depending) and can be booked online at www.rokerpier.co.uk.

Tours begin at the new entrance building, right next to the golden sands of Roker Beach, and finish inside the 138ft tall lighthouse.

During a tour, visitors get the chance to learn how engineer Henry Hay Wake pioneered a variety of techniques to build the pier and how skilled craftsmen used granite blocks weighing up to 45 tons each to produce the landmark structure.

Roker Pier and Lighthouse are situated in Roker which can be found on the A183 between Sunderland and South Tyneside, SR6 OPL.

There's lots of parking, much of it free.

Bus services E1, E2 and E6 from Sunderland city centre get to the seaside in under 15 minutes.

Tours can be pre booked at www.rokerpier.co.uk and operate most days depending on the weather.

The historic Roker Pier with its distinctive red and grey granite lighthouse, was officially opened on 23 September 1903. It is one of Sunderland's most iconic and recognisable landmarks, standing as a symbol of Victorian innovation and endeavour.

Washington Wetland Centre

WWT Washington is a wildlife haven for rare species where you can get up close to a variety of cute and friendly creatures.

Feed the gentle Hawaiian geese; they're so timid that even children can enjoy letting a goose nibble corn from their hands.

The shocking pink Chilean Flamingo flock is a family favourite too. You can learn more about these fascinating birds during talks by their keepers every day.

During the summer months the duckery is a great place to see freshly hatched, and seriously fluffy chicks up close.

But if it's cute animals you're looking for then you'll struggle to beat WWT Washington's otter family. They're Asian short clawed otters, the smallest of all the otters and can be seen playing and frolicking in and around the water, having a great time! Their daily feeding times include a commentary by their keepers.

And if your little ones want to frolic around too, there's a great play area at WWT Washington as well as a year-round programme of events and activities to entertain all of the family.

 Washington Wetland Centre is just off the A1231, follow the brown duck signs. Two minutes from A19, ten minutes from A1M (junction 65), NE38 8LE.

 Open from 9.30am every day except Christmas Day. Last admission 3.30pm in winter, 4.30pm in summer.

A large group of pink flamingos is gathered in a pond, surrounded by lush green trees and a small wooden building in the background. The scene is set in a natural, wooded area with a dense canopy of green foliage. The flamingos are in various poses, some standing in the water and others on the bank. The water is calm, reflecting the birds and the surrounding greenery. A small, simple wooden building with a gabled roof is visible on the right side of the pond. The overall atmosphere is peaceful and natural.

Meet exotic birds and some of the most adorable otters you'll find anywhere.

Hylton Castle

Much loved by local people, it has provided a home for barons and schoolboys (including Sir Joseph Swan, inventor of the incandescent light bulb), a stronghold for knights and a headquarters for soldiers.

New life has been breathed into this ancient building, which is now a community-based heritage-led visitor attraction.

The shell of the gatehouse has been transformed into a new space for the 21st century with new floors, stairs and a lift created inside the historic structure, housing a café, exhibition and flexible spaces for community and educational use.

National Glass Centre

Discover how glass arrived in Britain, how it's made and why Sunderland has such a rich glass making heritage at the city's National Glass Centre.

In one of the Centre's many exhibition spaces you can marvel at some of the world's finest contemporary glass and ceramic artist's work, as well as up and coming artist's work currently studying with the University of Sunderland, at the National Glass Centre.

Feel the heat of the furnace during one of the six daily glass making demonstrations and witness for yourself the skill of the Centre's resident glass makers.

With the addition of the Northern Gallery for Contemporary Art to the building, you can now enjoy a regularly changing programme of both established and emerging contemporary artists work.

Keep an eye out for opportunities to have a go yourself by taking part in a hands-on glass making experience. There's also an extensive family crafts programme with lots to do for all ages, particularly around school holiday times.

 National Glass Centre is just off the A1018, between Sunderland city centre and Roker. Follow the brown signs from Sunderland city centre and the A19. St Peter's Metro station is just a short walk away, SR6 0GL.

 The Centre is also on the Sunderland Connect bus route, service numbers 700 and 701.

Landmarks

Museum

Washington Old Hall

Washington Old Hall is the ancestral home of George Washington's family. Indeed, it's the very reason that he was called Washington and of course the capital of the USA is named after him.

The surviving stone manor house of Washington Old Hall includes parts of the original medieval home of George Washington's ancestors. Step into the 17th century on the ground floor and walk through the great hall, kitchen and panelled room.

Get a close look at a cookbook written in 1660 and find out what people were eating and how food was prepared. An incredible collection of George Washington related memorabilia commemorating his life and achievements can be found in the 'liberty room'.

It's not all glamour though; on the first floor is a recreation of the home of a family that lived in the hall up to the 1930s. At that time the hall was divided into accommodation for up to nine families.

Developed at different times, the gardens are small and contrasting showcasing elements of the past and present. They are unexpected and a welcoming escape from the hustle and bustle, nestled in the heart of Washington.

Look out for a host of indoor and outdoor events all year round.

Washington Old Hall is in Washington Village just off the A195, only a couple of minutes from the A1M or A19, NE38 7LE.

Go North East bus number 86 calls in Washington Village, a short walk from Washington Old Hall.

Visit the ancestral home of the first president of the USA. The fact that the town of Washington shares a name with the capital of the United States of America is no coincidence.

Theatre

Landmarks

Sunderland Empire Theatre

Grab a seat in a stunning Edwardian theatre and be entertained by some of the best shows, and biggest names in showbiz at Sunderland Empire.

The opulently decorated auditorium with its deep reds and intricate detailing is a textbook example of theatre design from over a century ago and the perfect place to be transported to another world.

There's nothing to beat the magic of live theatre when it comes to truly captivating an audience. Whether it's a good old-fashioned pantomime or the latest stage spectaculars direct from the West End, you can guarantee for a few hours at least, you'll be a million miles away from the real world.

Since the doors opened in 1907, everyone from the likes of Charlie Chaplin to The Beatles have performed on the Sunderland Empire stage.

Situated right in the heart of Sunderland city centre, it's really easy to extend your visit to Sunderland Empire by grabbing a pre-show bite to eat or a post-show drink at the Garden Place Bistro or one of the many bars nearby.

There's lots of city centre parking nearby too, and if you're arriving by public transport, the Empire is just a short walk from Park Lane Transport Interchange or Sunderland station.

Sunderland Empire Theatre is on High Street West in the centre of Sunderland, SR1 3EX.

The nearest car parks are St Mary's and The Bridges all only a short walk away and signposted from main through routes.

From Park Lane transport interchange, take a short walk towards Keel Square and bear left onto High Street West, Sunderland Empire Theatre is on your right.

Penshaw Monument and Herrington Country Park

The Greek style temple dominates the skyline, but it wasn't built as an attraction or a means of enjoying those amazing vistas. It's actually a monument to one of the most popular men Sunderland has ever known, the first Earl of Durham, John George Lambton..

The 70ft high Penshaw Monument was built as a memorial to him in 1844 after over £6,000 was raised by local people. It's modelled on the Greek temple of Hephaestus in Athens.

During weekends and Bank Holidays from Easter to the end of September you can get an even more spectacular view by climbing to the top as part of a National Trust tour. There is a small charge for the tours which run from 10am to 4.40pm.

Just across the road from Penshaw Monument is Herrington Country Park. Once the site of a Lambton colliery, today it is a peaceful green oasis. It's a great place for family bike rides or strolls past the lake loved by swans and ducks.

See map

There's a play park and café too all under the watchful gaze of Penshaw Monument of course!

If you're feeling more adventurous, it's not too far to riverside strolls beside the Wear at Fatfield, famed home of the legendary Lambton Worm. In folklore, the worm was a 'horrible beast' which terrorised the local people and the Lambton Family until finally defeated by John Lambton.

A stairway to the heavens and a step into the past. The view from Penshaw Monument is an impressive one. On a clear day vast swathes of the North East can be seen all around.

Penshaw Monument and Herrington Country Park are just off the A183, a couple of minutes from the A19, DH4 7EL.

St. Peter's Church

Founded in the 7th century by the pioneering Benedict Biscop, it developed into one of the greatest and most influential centres of learning in the northern world.

The church is one of the earliest sites of English Christianity, a place where 'modern' skills such as stonemasonry and glass making were brought to the British Isles and even where the timing of Easter was decided.

Creativity and innovation lie at the heart of St Peter's church. Great manuscripts were produced here that have survived to the present day and which represent some of Britain's greatest cultural treasures. These include the 8th century Anglo Saxon Bible, the Codex Amiatinus (now in Florence, Italy) and the oldest intact European book, the St Cuthbert Gospel, the latter of which was bought by the British Library in 2012 for the astonishing sum of £9m!

The monk and scholar, the Venerable Bede, flourished in this creative environment. Bede is perhaps most famous for his seminal work: The Ecclesiastical History of the English People, a work that is still one of the main sources of information on the origins of the English people and the rise of Christianity in Britain.

Although much of the original monastery no longer remains, thanks in part to the Vikings and the Reformation, it is still possible to walk the pathway through the original west porch door and examine the intricate Anglo-Saxon carvings and stonework - a pathway almost certainly walked by Bede himself over 1,300 years ago.

St. Peter's church is just off the A1018, between Sunderland city centre and Roker. Follow the brown signs from Sunderland city centre and the A19, SR6 0DY.

St Peter's Metro station is just a short walk away. St. Peter's is also on the Sunderland

Vibrant city life

Hopefully our ten best things to do have piqued your interest, but if you fancy a little bit more why not squeeze in a day of retail therapy with plenty of relaxation coupled with good food and drink.

Shop

The Bridges shopping centre is at the heart of the city. The bright and airy covered mall is home to everything you need for some great retail therapy.

If high street brands are your thing it's the place to be. If you're looking for something more unusual, independent and speciality stores are just around the corner too.

Relax

Sunderland city centre's Keel Square is a fantastic public square complete with fountains and plenty of seating that makes for an ideal place to break a shopping journey.

There's a programme of events taking place in Keel Square too, so you might well catch a food festival, live music or other performances while you're there.

The pub is a British institution and you'll find no finer example of a classic British pub than the Dun Cow on High Street West. It's an Edwardian triumph with carved wood, mirrors and polished brass.

In a similar vein and just down the road is The Isis, looking just how a traditional pub should. The drinks range is impressive too, with a focus on ales, particularly those brewed locally.

Refresh

Sunderland boasts a variety of great bars and restaurants, as well as cafes, takeaway eateries and pubs. The City offers a wide range of cuisines, including delicious American-style burgers, locally sourced steak and flavourful Italian food as well as Indian, Chinese and more!

Take a much needed break from shopping or exploring Sunderland's sights with a cuppa, a coffee or slice of cake at one of Sunderland's quaint cafes, or why not finish your working day with a pint or a cocktail at one of Sunderland's excellent bars? You can even settle down for local seafood, fish and chips or ice-cream at Sunderland's nearby coastal eateries.
